Physical Description:

This useful and interesting collection was given by a descendant of the Coleman-Deering-Wells and allied families of Kennebunkport and Kennebunk. Most of the significant material concerns people and organizations in Kennebunkport, but there is some useful Kennebunk material (such as the specifications for Kennebunk’s first Ross Block).

There are documents, broadsides, ephemera of a later period in this collection that are not known to have survived elsewhere, such as the two broadsides, the Ross block specifications, etc., and important Tax Lists, etc.

The collection represents, is an example of, the kinds of important and fascinating documents that end up in private hands – the flotsam and jetsam of a family that was significantly involved in events in a small town.

The bulk of the collection is in one box. Numerous other items are stored in other locations as indicated.

The collection bears inventory number 88.31.
